How to Write an Essay Outline. Essay outlines provide structure and guidance for writers as they begin the drafting process. An outline should briefly summarize.

Example Outline The following outline is for a page paper discussing the link between educational attainment and health. The First Steps Before you can begin outlining, you need to have a sense of what you will argue in the essay. At this point, your notes probably lack much coherent order. Generalizing The first step is to look over each individual piece of information that you've written and assign it to a general category. She also says it makes people less empathetic. Background After the initial introduction, background on your topic often follows. Each major point should be a clear claim that relates to the central argument of your paper. Under the category "Fundraising," for example, you might have quotes about each candidate's estimation of its importance, statistics about the amount of time each candidate spent fundraising, and an idea about how the importance of fundraising never can be overestimated. They follow the order in which you placed them in your sentence. Outlining Video. Additionally, if you are having trouble revising a paper, making an outline of each paragraph and its topic sentence after you have written your paper can be an effective way of identifying a paper's strengths and weaknesses. Ask yourself, "If I were to file this in a database, what would I file it under? An introduction should begin with discussion of your specific topic not a broad background overview and provide just enough context definitions of key terms, for example to prepare your readers for your thesis or purpose statement. Individual pieces of information that at first seemed important can begin to appear irrelevant when grouped into a general category. Sample Major Point: Employment and physical health may be a good first major point for this sample paper. On the other hand, topic sentences are statements that support your thesis statement, but at the same time, they represent the main message of each paragraph in the body. Also, give a brief statement of your verdict and put a call-to-action. Sentences to support your general argument might read: "No candidate has ever raised too much money [your idea]. Historical Employment Overview: Unskilled laborers in the past were frequently unionized and adequately compensated for their work cite sources. Applying the principles of outline making, construct your introduction by having some details that would hook your audience. Major points build on each other, moving the paper forward and toward its conclusion. Sample Thesis Statement: Because of their income deficit Smith, and general susceptibility to depression Jones, , students who drop out of high school before graduation maintain a higher risk for physical and mental health problems later in life. Most likely, your ideas are still in the order in which they occurred to you; your notes and possible quotes probably still adhere to the chronology of the sources you've examined. Let's say your thesis is that financial resources played the most important role in the Republican Primary. On record, there have been more deaths around the world from text-driving and drink-driving. In composing this segment, start with a transitional device, word or phrase such as first, another, next, etc.
